Guard Vehicles at Camp Curtis Guild Accounted For

READING, Mass. – National Guard vehicles and equipment stored at Camp Curtis Guild have been inventoried here today and are accounted for.

The Guard was notified by the Reading Police Department about a possible break-in at the camp this morning. Initial inspection of the facility by Guard and law enforcement personnel revealed damage to a gate that suggested it had been knocked down from the inside out.

Several Massachusetts National Guard units store vehicles and equipment at the camp. The units inventoried the vehicles and equipment, concluding nothing was missing. Building security was also checked and all buildings were reported as secure.

The cause of the gate damage is under investigation by the Massachusetts National Guard and has not yet been determined. More information will be made available as the investigation progresses.
